

Singapore-based Extream Ventures Launches S$20M Venture Capital Fund, secures funding from Georgieff Capital & ART Texas Capital

Singapore (Friday 18 December 2009) – Extream Ventures, a Singapore-based early-stage venture capital firm, today announced that it has secured commitments from Georgieff Capital (Germany) and ART Texas Capital (USA) for Extream Venture Fund I, its new S$20M early-stage fund focused on supporting the next generation of emerging technologies in Singapore.

“With considerable investments in R&D, Singapore is Asia’s new hotbed of innovation. Our vibrant start-up ecosystem is home to an ever-growing number of innovative companies leveraging advanced technologies. We aim to catalyse these young companies to the global stage by surrounding them with the right combination of capital, mentoring, expertise and networks,” said Pierre Hennes, the fund’s Managing Partner.

Extream Ventures is funded by institutional investors, high net worth individuals and the National Research Foundation (“NRF”) of Singapore. It is one of only six funds managers selected under the NRF’s Early Stage Venture Funding Scheme.

“To develop a dynamic economy with a vibrant entrepreneurial sector, we need to make innovation a pervasive culture. With these new partnerships, we hope that more technologically innovative businesses can be developed to grow and nurture our home-grown Singapore start-ups into global enterprises,” said Dr Francis Yeoh, Chief Executive Officer of NRF.

Alexander Georgieff, founder and managing partner of Frankfurt and London based Georgieff Capital added: “My partners and I welcome the opportunity to extend our footprint as advisors of and investors in high technology companies to Singapore which provides a particularly attractive home to such companies with its excellent infrastructure and ideal geographic location. We look forward to actively supporting the Extream Ventures team in achieving exceptional investment returns.”

“We are very pleased to welcome Georgieff Capital and ART Texas Capital as cornerstone investors to Extream Ventures. They are experienced investors with a strong global network; true partners who will add significant value to the underlying portfolio, extending our capabilities in areas such as business development, alliances and exits,” said Pierre Hennes.

The Fund will assume the role of lead investor, typically investing up to $3M per company as part of a Startup or Series A round of funding, and expects to invest in eight to ten innovative early-stage companies. Douglas Abrams, the fund's Managing Partner added: "Extream Ventures remains true to the original mission of early-stage venture capital whereby smaller funds can capture large returns by investing in very young companies."

Extream Ventures is a joint venture between Upstream Ventures and Expara, two of the most active players in Singapore's market for early-stage capital.
